"According to information derived from Japanese sources and received by Admiral Alexieff's staff, the Japanese attacked the Russian position at Port Arthur during the night of July 10. They were repulsed with emormous losses. It is difficult to calculate even approximately the number of Japanese casualties, which amounted, it is said, to the immense figure of 30,000.

New York, July 13 .- The Associated Press received the following telegram today from Count Cassini, Russian ambassador, dated Bar Harbor, Maine: "An official statement to the general staff from Admiral Alexieff reports that news has been obtained from Japanese sources to the effect that a night attack made on Port Arthur on July 11 was repulsed and that the Japanese losses were terrible, nearing the enormous number of 30,000 men."
